I object to the council adding a levy to the rates for largely unspecified projects, those few named are for matters which are not strictly things which the council should be involved in. This council seems to dabble in private enterprise affairs to the detriment those traditional council jobs. I object to a council which has a cash balance of millions asking for more to do things which the majority of residents really don't want. It seems a sad comment on our age when the elected body thinks it is the master instead of the servant of the people. Perhaps their catch cry should be "go to sleep Warringah" not wake up
