An increase in the price for providing fresh and clean water for the community of NSW should be covered by the government. Fresh clean water is a natural resource that we all have a right to access. There are costs involved in maintaining and supplying this, however, it should be something that our government provides and any increases to the costs to further maintain a healthy and sustainable supply of water should not be something that individuals have to pay for on top of their current bills. If the increase cost is only passed on to businesses then they will in turn pass this onto consumers. Individuals cannot afford this increase and it should be up to the government to manage our taxes to cover the increase in costs that are required for this basic human right to be maintained.
