The greatest current rip off in Australia is the energy rebate for solar panels. The retailer is giving 6.7 cents whilst charging people 40 cents. The difference should not be more than 20 cents. The last report by IPART into solar inputs were based on 6.7 cents on the fact that they could get renewables for 5 cents. If this is the case, how come electricity prices are going up if you can get more for renewables? Regards, Eddie Ellis.
