As the cost of living and inflation are suffocating Australia citizens, adding to the misery of our daily lives by increasing the water price, which our livelihood relies on it, is just like adding salt to the deep wound of our economic situation and mental health. People will suffer mentally and physically as a result of water price increase. The Sydney Water must look at other wasteful practices they have to reduce their spending rather than passing the costs to the citizens, for example by reducing the bonuses of CEOs and managers and their luxury/lavish entitlements, increasing the efficiency of the processes, and not hiring ridiculously expensive consultants from the big 4 consultancy firm like Deloitte, EY, or the controversial PWC, and many more ways of saving money.
