

Author name: T. Roberts

Date of submission: Saturday, 16 November 2024

Your submission for this review:

You have buried the question of costs deep in the dam, so much so that I gave up trying to understand the padding. My comment is that while aware of the constant increase in costs for our day to day requirements, such as electricity, water, waste-collection and health there is a constant suggestion that there is a need for a 'larger' start increase, which will be reduced 'next year and there on', perhaps. Why the huge increase in 2025? Is this an 'catch-up' or is it explained in that jumble of information that translates to ' Just trust us, we know what we are doing?'.